

T/

It Jewelry: Didier Peiro Couture at New York Fashion Week

By: DonnaHo (226) | 02/24/2010 10:25 AM

Didier Peiro Couture

During the midst of craziness, known as New York Fashion Week, I had the chance to stop by the Waldorf Astoria to meet French jewelry designer Didier Peiro, who presented his collection this season in a runway show along with designer Andres Aquino.

The Victorian-inspired gold dipped lace bracelets and necklaces were my favorite pieces, but everything I saw was to die for. Much like in haute couture clothing, the designer uses the same kind of fine details in his one-of-a-kind jewelry.

I also had the chance to talk to him while I viewed the stunning collection. The couture jewelry designer told me he believes everything should be 100 percent real, which means he only uses 24k gold, the best sterling silver, and the highest quality of semi-precious and precious stones. The rich colors and designs in this collection were inspired by his travels to India and Madagascar.

The designer also spoke to me about some of the designers he has worked with including Elie Saab, Jean Paul Gaultier, Christian Lacroix, and Yves Saint Laurent--quite an impressive list right? He takes his art seriously and it shows.

Tags: Didier Peiro, french, jewelry, accessories, fashion, fall 2010, couture |

<http://myitthings.com/DonnaHo/Post/fashion/It-Jewelry/It-Jewelry:-Didier-Peiro-Couture-at-New-York-Fashion-Week/132242010102571690.htm>

©2008 MyItThings.com All Rights Reserved. MyItThings.com is a Trademark of 2 Brains Media, LLC