

Diary of a Labellover By A. Fashionista

September 07, 2008

sararose rocks the runway with her inspired evening wear

Friday night the audience at couture fashion week was treated to the debut collection of the talented, young evening wear designer Sararose Krenger. Her designs can be described as v. feminine with gorgeous detailing in the hems and collars and empire waists, much like the vintage fashion of the 1930s. There were many moments in the show that I felt I was in the novel The Great Gatsby. The corseted back was another fine detail that Sararose added that would make women everywhere swoon. After the last look, I was shocked to find how young she actually was but at the same time it was exciting because it made it all the more exciting to be apart of the debut of someone so talented and imaginative. It was as if she was the protege of Vivienne Westwood. Lauren Conrad she is not!

http://diaryofalabellover.typepad.com/cheese_sandwich_diaries/2008/09/sararose-rocks-the-runway-with-her-inspired-evening-wear.html